PREFACE

MICHIGAN is a fruitful field for the bibliographer's skill. Few States in the Union are more diversified in resources, development and history than is the State of Michigan in the heart of the Great Lakes region, and its varied life has produced an enormous and bewildering mass of printed and manuscript materials expressive of this growth,—materials indispensable to the professional investigator, but equally so to the casual writer, the newspaper man, the club woman, the speaker, the lawyer, the preacher, the student, the citizen, in search of information upon any one of thousands of subjects. These materials, at first widely scattered in the places of their origin, have been partially collected into libraries and other depositories. Yet it is often not easy to learn in what libraries they are or what is their nature and extent. To make this easier is the bibliographer's task, and a patient and laborious task it is.

The present volume is almost entirely the work of Mr. Floyd B. Streeter, Archivist of the Michigan Historical Commission, who brings to the work a trained mind and who has here done an able service for the people of Michigan. It would be strange however if no defects should be found. In most eastern States and in many western States, like Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa much work has been done along this line, to serve as a guide in these states, but Michigan up to this time is practically a virgin field for the bibliographer.

Starting with the purpose of making a complete bibliography of Michigan, it later seemed best to limit the work to certain definite lines. This was imperative, on account of the vastness of the material, if the work was to be held within reasonable limits. The decision was made to cover the titles of all printed materials, maps and atlases relating directly to Michigan included in the Library of Congress, the Detroit Public Library, the Grand Rapids Public Library, the Michigan State Library, the General Library of the University of Michigan, experiment station bulletins in the Library of the Michigan Agricultural College, and the maps in the Port Huron Public Library and Library of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin,—also the manuscript materials in the Burton Historical Collection,—all Michigan materials accessioned in these libraries before July 1, 1917.

These sources have provided the work with over 8,600 entries, including a thousand maps and atlases and two thousand volumes of manuscript. They do not however include much of the materials in newspapers, magazines, books of exploration and travel and separate items in many other classes of publications. It is planned to cover these in succeeding volumes, together with materials from other libraries and scattered materials from the general field. Indeed any scope decided upon for a given volume or volumes of a bibliography must necessarily be tentative, since new "finds" are constantly coming to light and "the making of books and records" ceases only with time.

In using the volume, the key is the index. While in the text the arrangement of entries is in a measure alphabetical by author, no entry is made more than once and there is no cross-reference. This has made possible the economy of space and adequate classification of subject matter, following the usage of the annual volumes of Writings in American History. Detailed explanations for the use of the index appear in their proper place.

An attempt to express here the acknowledgments due to particular individuals would mean the enumeration of hundreds of names, but special mention should be made of the service rendered by the following custodians, librarians and assistants connected with the libraries mentioned, to whose helpfulness a large part of the success of the work is due: Mr. W. W. Bishop, Librarian, University of Michigan Library; Mr. F. L. D. Goodrich, Reference Librarian, University of Michigan Library; Mrs. Mary Spencer, State Librarian; Miss Ella Hymans, formerly of the State Library and now of the University of Michigan Library; Mrs. L. E. Landon, Librarian, Michigan Agricultural College Library; Clarence M. Burton, Burton Historical Collection; Miss G. B. Krum, Chief, Burton Historical Collection; Mr. Adam Strohm, Librarian, Detroit Public Library; William L. Jenks, Port Huron Public Library; Miss Annie A. Pollard, Grand Rapids Public Library.
